Let a person pinch your arm and they think they own the world.

Three excellent students from an advanced (?) English class.

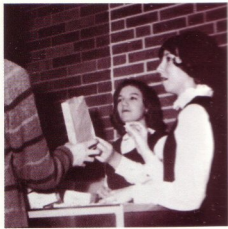

*"The world is now too dangerous for anything but the truth, too small for anything but brotherhood". — Arthur Powell
A hand extended in friendship is a step forward in the achievement of brotherhood at Lanphier High School.*

little longer, maybe . . .*

Put your glasses back on, Mark, that was their basket.

We didn't burn the popcorn; Charlie did.

Hey guys, I finally found the key to . . .

We, the class of '69, realize that we have at last, after many long and difficult lessons and various conflicting experiences, arrived at our goal, the completion of our high school education.

Let us make loyalty our controlling spirit, and in being loyal to ourselves, to our class, and to our school, we shall of necessity be loyal to every larger claim that the American nation can demand of us.

As we step forth to represent in the outside world the school from which we pass, we resolve to voice our principles, our aims, and our ambitions; for it is through them and what we make of them that all honor must reflect upon the school whose seal we bear.

C'mon baby, light my candle.

"Wheeee!!!"

Lanphier guys resort to cavellike tactics to get their girls.

Here come the brides.
